Claim 17 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

The step of “matching a learners needs as indicated in the learners profile” lacks antecedent basis since the profile was not previously stated as having information on the learner’s needs. The phrase “presentation having a style most suited to those needs” is indefinite.

Claims 16-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as containing subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention.

Claim 16 calls for a method step in which a profile for a student is created, with the profile containing information on the student’s “style of learning”. The disclosure of the present invention states, on pages 12-14, that this profile has four parts. These are: (1) Student Curriculum; (2) Teaching Strategies; (3) Student present standing; and (4) Personalized Information. Examiner has reviewed each of these four sections but does not explicit disclosure stating that the student profile contains information on “style of learning”. Accordingly, it is believed that this feature is new matter.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 16-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Lee et al ('454).

Lee discloses a method in which learning programs, such as a series of lectures on history (page 7, lines 17-28) are stored in a database within a computer network. The student is provided with a communication link, in the form of a desktop PC, which communicates with the processor over a local area network (LAN) connection. A LAN network inherently includes at least one data channel. A student profile, in the form of information on homework assignment results and student progress information are stored in a database file (page 8, lines 28-36). Assignments of presentations to the student are selected, based on the information in the student profile (page 8, line 28-page 9, line 2) and presented to the student. The presentation is therefore matched to the learning needs of the student.

The information in the student profile includes homework assignment results, which is "the learners knowledge of structures of organized information" as defined in claim 18.

Remarks

Applicant argues that the reference to Lee does not disclose a student profile in which information on the student's "style of learning" is stored. However, applicant does admit that the system of Lee does create a student profile and does store information on the student in that profile.

Examiner has reviewed the disclosure of the present invention, in particular, pages 12-14 discussing the content of the student profile, but does not find any explicit statement that this profile contains information on the student's "style of learning". The student profile described in the present invention does contain information on "teaching strategies", which perhaps could constitute "a style of teaching", but there is no explicit statement that the student's "style of learning" is actually stored in the student profile. The student profile is also described as containing personalized information on a student, such as physical impairments and memory characteristics, but again, there is no statement that the student "style of learning" is stored as information.

Accordingly, this feature is deemed to be new matter.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
